Amends Constitution: State funds provided for private, religious, homeschool, tuition/expenses when parent declines K-12 public school

Result of “Yes” Vote: “Yes” vote provides state funds for private, religious, homeschool, tuition/other education expenses when parent declines K-12 public school; funding based on public school distributions.

Result of “No” Vote: “No” vote retains current law. No constitutional requirement of state funds for private school/homeschool; funds for religious institutions prohibited. Some funds for private programs.

Summary: Amends Constitution. Currently, Oregon Constitution requires state funding of public schools. Statutes permit funding some private programs, including alternative education programs. Constitution prohibits funding religious institutions. Measure requires state to provide funds for K-12 private/religious schools, homeschooling, tuition, and other education expenses (including technology, transportation, administrative costs) when parent declines public school. State determines “basic school support funding amount,” which must be greater of $9,500 or average amount per student provided to school districts. When requested, state must deliver 80% of basic support amount to an account, administered by nonprofit parent chooses, for educational services. May use funds remaining after high school for colleges, vocational schools in Oregon. Those receiving funds need not change creed, education practices, admissions policy, curriculum. Applies starting July 2025.
